

Tasmania's restrictions have eased. What do I need to know?

By working together every Tasmanian has helped to minimise the spread of coronavirus in our community. Tasmania needs to continue to safely manage the risks of COVID-19.

Keeping safe in gatherings

COVID-19 is spread through contact with people. In any gathering (group of people) or setting it is important to maintain:

- physical distancing of at least 1.5 metres between people
- hand hygiene
- respiratory hygiene (sneeze or cough into your elbow or a tissues and clean your hands after coughing or sneezing)
- frequent environmental cleaning and disinfection.

Is it recommended that you download the COVIDSafe app on your phone, to help with tracing contacts of confirmed cases.

To keep protecting lives and keep Tasmania on the road to recovery, everyone must continue doing the right thing:

Physical distance when out

Wash your hands regularly

Stay home if unwell

Get tested for COVID-19 if you have any cold or flu symptoms

Be aware of what restrictions are currently in place

Vulnerable people are encouraged to continue to stay home and protect their health, and take extra precautions when out.

This advice applies to:

- Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people 50 years and older with one or more chronic medical conditions
- People 65 years and older with chronic medical conditions
- All people 70 years and older
- People with compromised immune systems
- People with a disability, if you have received medical advice to do so.

This does not mean that these people are unable to leave home or to visit others.

But members of these high-risk groups should take extra precautions to avoid unwell visitors, including unwell children who might not fully understand physical distancing boundaries.

Why is staying 1.5 metres from others important?

Physical distancing continues to be the strongest safeguard to prevent the spread of COVID-19. You must continue to maintain a safe distance of no less than 1.5 metres between yourself and others, where safe and practical.

What are the gathering and density limits?

Businesses, venues and workplaces must continue to put measures in place that help reduce the risk of spreading COVID-19.

The current gathering restrictions allow for a maximum of 1000 people in an outdoor setting. Indoors the gathering limit is 250 people for each undivided indoor space.

The number of people actually allowed in a premises (up to the maximums caps) depends on the floor space available. Each person must have 2sqm of space available.

Where the number of people permitted according to the density limit is less than the gathering limit, the lower number applies.

For sport and recreation, full contact training, full competition sport (contact and non-contact) and use of change rooms and other shared facilities is permitted.

At your home

Gatherings at homes – including shacks – are limited to a maximum of 100 people at any one time. This does not include residents of the household. You should not visit others or have visitors to your home if you are unwell.
